

HELPING BOYS THRIVE!

The problem of male underachievement is persistent and hard to ignore. In nearly every academic and behavioural marker, boys and young men are struggling.

Boys account for 80% of children diagnosed with ADHD, 80% of school suspensions, 90% of juvenile alcohol and drug violations, and 3 out of 4 suicides. Would we not see such numbers as troubling if they represented girls?

Being a boy is not a social disease. How can we foster engagement, achievement, and well-being among boys?

Discover solutions to critical topics

- What do trends say about educating boys, and especially certain sub-groups of boys?
- What interferes with boys' learning and school success?
- How to help boys regulate their emotions?
- How to address the link between moving, visualizing, and learning?
- How to help boys in ways that also respect girls' needs?
